Claude MaGee of Patmos Commits Suicide on Friday

Farmer, 42, Found Dangling From Rope on Rafters of Barn

HOUSE HAD BURNED

Estranged From Wife, Believe Man Fired House, Killed Self

The body of Claude MaGee, 42-year-old Hempstead county farmer, was found early Friday morning hanging from a rope tied to the rafters of his barn about two miles south of Patmos.

Coroner J. H. Weaver and Deputy Sheriff Reginald Bearden who investigated said that it was a case of suicide and no inquest was necessary.

The body was discovered at 4:30 a. m. by Leroy Smith, 19, following a fire which destroyed the MaGee home early Friday.

Officers theorized that MaGee, who was reported to be living estranged from his wife, fired his home and then went to the barn and committed suicide.

Investigation showed, officers said, that MaGee climbed to the ceiling of his barn, tied a rope to the rafters and around his neck and jumped. The fall broke his neck.

Officers said they found no notes or farewell letters.

MaGee's wife, who was living in that community, was attracted to the scene of the fire along with several other neighbors. When MaGee was found missing the Smith boy went to the barn and discovered the body.

MaGee had been a resident of the Patmos community about two years, moving there from Texas. Besides his widow, he is survived by four sisters, two of whom live at Abilene, Texas.

The body is held at Hope Furniture company undertaking parlors, pending funeral arrangements.

Lord Cecil Wins Nobel Peace Prize

Thinks Pacifists Futile—Should Help League of Nations

STOCKHOLM, Sweden.—(AP)—The 1937 Nobel peace prize was awarded Thursday to Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, one of the founders of the League of Nations and a leading advocate of disarmament.

The former British cabinet member was selected because of his work in the League and his efforts to promote international goodwill. The prize is worth 150,000 Swedish kroner (about $40,000).

The name of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull was before the committee that awarded the prize. He had been sponsored by several Latin American countries.

Lord Cecil is on a visit to the United States, his first since he received the Woodrow Wilson peace prize 12 years ago.

Lord Cecil learned of the honor in New York just before Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and himself a winner of the peace prize, presented him with an honorary degree of doctor of laws. In the United States to attend a conference of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through Churches, he was the guest last week-end of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

The Nobel peace prize is awarded by a committee of five named by the Norwegian Storting, or Parliament.

Last year's winner of the peace award was Carlos Saavedra Lamas, foreign minister of Argentina. The last Americans to receive the peace prize were Dr. Butler and Jane Addams, founder of Chicago's Hull House, who shared the 1931 award.

Mystery of Vanished Bride Is Solved 20 Years After Explosion on High Seas

Skip Tracers No. 2 Ill-Fated Story of Broken Honeymoon

Doctor's Interference Blamed for Unspoken Marital Quarrel

IT WAS HER FACE

Wife Wasn't Angry—But the Explosion Had Disfigured Her

This is the second of a series of six exciting stories gleaned from the files of the Skip Tracers Co. in New York City. Each story is from real life, about real people. Names of persons and places are fictitious and if the name of any actual person is mentioned here it is purely a coincidence.

They were the most graceful couple on the floor of the ship salon. And the happiest.

"It seems so funny, Larry, to have people calling me Mrs. Lawrence Stamm," she was saying, eyes sparkling up at him as they glided across the floor. "I don't think I'll ever get used to it."

Larry just smiled down at his bride of two days. She chattered on. "Oh, Larry, dear, we'll be so happy together, won't we? Our life will be just one big honeymoon, won't it, dear? I'm having such a grand time now and yet I just can't wait until we get back and open up our little home and

There was a horrifying, deafening blast. The ship shivered. Things tumbled down.

The salon was full of fire. And frenzy. Women screamed, men groaned. Terror everywhere.

Aftermath of Horror

Lawrence Stamm found himself awake with everything around him white. Someone was bustling about. "Now, now, everything will be all right," a voice was saying, "just be still."

"My wife, my wife," asked Larry, "where is she? Let me up. I must find her. Let me up, I tell you, let me up."

"Your wife, Mr. Stamm, is all right. She's here in the hospital in another room. She was rescued along with you."

"The ship? The ship?"

"It sank. An explosion in the boiler room, they tell me. Now, just you rest and you'll see your wife soon. Maybe tomorrow."

The Bride Who Wanted to Hide

Joan didn't want him to see her. She lay between the covers, bandages completely covering her head and face. She could not talk, but Larry could tell that she didn't want him around.

"What's the matter with her, doctor? Is she badly hurt?"

"The doctor was hurt."

"This is no time to talk," he said brusquely, and walked away.

Day after day, Larry came to the hospital but not a word of information could he get from the doctor, and his pretty Joan, bride of only a week, seemed to continue to resent his presence.

Still wearing a hood of bandages, she couldn't talk but Larry knew that she wanted him to go away and stop away. But day after day he came to sit hour after hour beside his bride.

One day she was gone. Without a word. Without a trace.

Larry came to the hospital as usual that day and found her room empty. No one knew—or would say—where she had gone. The nurse, the internist, the doctor, the doorman, and even the police. None of them knew.

If she had to work for a living, she would be a seamstress—

Congress Speeds Up the Farm Bill

Marketing Quotas for Corn Processing Tax Is Voted Down

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Congressional committees neared completion of farm control bills Friday while senators and representatives devoted another day to talk.

Chairman Smith, South Carolina Democrat, announced that his senate committee would vote Saturday on the "ever normal granary" bill.

The house committee, taking up individual items, voted marketing quotas for corn, and voted down processing taxes on both corn and wheat.

Senator Connally, Texas Democrat, contained the filibuster by Southerners against the anti-lynching bill.

'Hindenburg' Line Defending Nanking Cracked in South

Invaders Only 3 Miles From Soochow, Keystone of the Line

PROBE U. S. POSITION

Senators Want to Know Why Envoy Bullitt Went to Poland

CHANGHAI, China.—(AP)—Japanese troops Friday cracked the southern pivot of the Chinese "Hindenburg line" defending Nanking, and struck shattering blows along its central and northern fronts.

Fighting through mud and rain the Japanese drove the last Chinese defenders from Kasking and occupied that vital southern link in the "Hindenburg" chain.

The central Japanese columns advanced to within three miles of Soochow, the line's keystone.

Congress May Probe

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Senator Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, and Senator Lewis, Illinois Democrat, joined Friday in asking an investigation of a report that William G. Bullitt, American ambassador to France, had been sent to Poland to "warn" that country against participating in the Italo-German-Japanese anti-Communist pact.

Vandenberg interrupted the anti-lynching filibuster on the senate floor to read a newspaper dispatch from Paris which said Bullitt had gone for that purpose.

The account said Bullitt was understood to be "acting under instructions from President Roosevelt."

Parley Is Failure

PARIS, France.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos told the Chamber of Deputies Friday that efforts to conciliate the Chinese-Japanese conflict at the Brussels conference had failed.

He said a new step toward mediation must be taken at Geneva.

The Brussels conference recessed last Monday for a week after passing a resolution criticizing Japan.

At the Brussels conference Delbos had declared that France followed the "attitude of conciliation demanded by the entire League of Nations. Conciliation collapsed. In several days it will be necessary to make a new decision at Geneva."

R. Weisenberger Leaves City Race

Announces Withdrawal as Candidate for City Attorney

Royce Weisenberger announced Friday that he had withdrawn as a candidate for city attorney. He issued the following statement:

"The Arkansas statutes require any candidate for municipal office in a city of the first class to have been a resident thereof for six months prior to the election, regardless of whether it be a primary or general election. Of course, the candidate must possess a poll tax certifying him to vote in that election. Realizing that all might aspire for public office, but only those eligible might serve, if fortunate enough to receive the greatest number of votes cast, I weighed very carefully my qualifications in this regard prior to filing as a candidate for City Attorney, subject to the action of the Democratic primary, November 30, 1937.

"My poll tax receipt is dated April 13, 1937, and entitles me to vote in the approaching primary election. Because of the fact that it was issued in another county, I duly presented it to the Chairman of the City Central Committee and the City Clerk for inspection last week. I carry it in my bill fold at all times and will be glad to show it to those who have spread the rumor that I was without a poll tax, should they be willing to identify themselves.

Mrs. Weisenberger, Frances and I moved to Hope within the corporate limits on May 29, 1937. We brought a truckload of furniture with us. I immediately opened my present law office here; but realizing that although I was no stranger to the practice of law, a new lawyer in any city, whether it be his home town or not, must temporarily rely on funds other than those derived from his practice for a living. I sold school supplies out of the county for a few weeks. On one occasion I was absent from the city for three weeks, but my family resided during that period at our present residence and I continued to maintain my present office.

"Apparently my opponents do not consider the above sufficient to satisfy the statutes for their henchmen have started a whispering campaign to the effect that should I be elected, my

Bailey Moves to Revise Utility Tax

Governor Finds Too Wide a Range Assessment Rates

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The State Utilities Commission ordered a $270,000 annual reduction Friday in the rates of the Arkansas Power & Light Co.

The reduction is based on consumption for the year ending June 30, 1937, with the new rate scheduled to be applied on all billings on and after February 1, 1938.

The commission said the Arkansas Power & Light Co. operated in 55 of the state's 75 counties, and that the reduction would be effective on all residential, commercial and small power consumers throughout the company's system in the state.

To Revise Assessments

LITTLE ROCK.—Citing figures showing that utility company valuations for tax assessing purposes in Arkansas usually are from 11 to 30 per cent of values claimed for rate making purposes, Governor Bailey asked the State Utilities Commission and the Arkansas Corporation Commission Thursday to recompute these values.

The governor's suggestions were contained in a letter dated before he entered the hospital for a minor ailment Wednesday. He said he had hoped to attend joint conferences of the two commissions in the near future but that illness would force his absence from the capitol for a brief period.

"I appreciate the fact that the values

Workbench Glamor for Class Misfits

SERIOUS thinkers have been stroking their beards thoughtfully of late and crying that the great American middle class is being squeezed almost to death by the pressure of hard times. What they fail to add is that the great middle class has just been asking for it by taking unto its bosom a great many people who would be happier and more prosperous elsewhere.

This fact was neatly touched on recently by the publicist, William Feather, in an article in Nation's Business.

In spite of unemployment, says Mr. Feather, the nation today suffers from an acute shortage of skilled workers, and the shortage is going to be even more acute in the near future. And why? Because the average ambitious high school lad of today has his heart set on a dignified white collar job, and scorns the prospect of being an expert turret lathe operator, a first-class pattern maker, a skilled machinist or anything else that requires manual labor.

IT ISN'T the ambitious high school lad's fault. We have glorified the white collar man; as Mr. Feather remarks, we have taught the young chap to look forward to a career rather than a job. He feels that it would somehow be disgraceful for him to wear overalls.

The result of all of this is that the swollen middle class is jammed with people who simply can't make a decent living in their chosen occupations.

We have penniless young lawyers, who wait with desperate anxiety for the practice that never materializes; hopeful young dentist who can find no teeth to fill; salesmen by the score and the gross who skimp along on a hand to mouth basis, a scant jump ahead of the sheriff; clerks who get along on day laborers' pay; and a whole army of luckless mortals who try half a dozen jobs in the course of a decade, succeeding in none of them and eternally driven by the haunting fear of poverty.

Yet all the while the skilled trades, lack men, and the skilled worker goes along happily and comfortably on an income that would look like very heaven to these harassed white collar misfits.

WHAT'S the answer? Mr. Feather suggests, simply, that we devise uniforms to take the place of overalls: and before you start laughing, just consider the prestige which a neat uniform gives to the job it goes with.

We have an abundance of good technical high schools to prepare boys for the skilled trades. It would be a fine thing if we could find some way—whether Mr. Feather's, or some other—to show young men that the white collar is not the only badge of distinction in this country.

Maybe the uniforms would do it. Maybe a universal return to common sense would. Whatever the solution, it is high time we found it.

Sidetracking Justice

LAWYERS who object to public criticism of the way their profession does its job might profitably give a little thought to the need for stripping away the involved verbiage of legal forms.

For example: in Louisiana recently two men were indicted for murder. They are escaping trial, not because the state failed to prove that they were guilty, but simply because the man who drew up the indictment made an unimportant little mistake in English.

The indictment, naming the two men for the murder, said that they "did feloniously, wilfully, unlawfully and of his malice aforethought murder" the deceased gentleman. It should, of course, have said "of their malice aforethought"; because it said "his" instead, the state supreme court quashed the indictment.

What under the shining sun a piffing mistake like that could have to do with the main question at issue—whether the two men did in fact murder a fellow citizen—is something no layman can hope to figure out.

Vitiligo Is Loss of Skin Pigment, Resulting in White Spots on Body

This is the 25th of a series in which Dr. Morris Fishben discusses diseases of the skin.

(No. 375)

In vitiligo, pigment entirely disappears from some areas on the skin. These spots appear white in contrast with the rest of the skin and are much more prominent when the rest of the skin is tanned or sunburned. The cause for this absence of pigment is not known.

Vitiligo also occurs in negroes, making them appear to be turning white and there are cases on record in which most of the pigment has disappeared from the skin of a colored person.

Perhaps some condition of the nervous system is related, but this is not known with certainty. Apparently there is no drug that is of any value in the treatment of this condition.

It has been suggested that those who are exceedingly sensitive have their skin painted with some of the cosmetic preparations now available so that the white spots will not be so prominent.

In the ordinary processes of commercial tattooing, coloring matter is introduced purposely into the skin. It is quite possible, however, for people to be accidentally tattooed as, for example, when a shotgun explodes a fine charge of powder into the skin. Certain substances may irritate the skin and color it permanently. This is one of the dangers of self-treatment of various diseases. Cases have been reported of coloration of the skin by copper, mercury, bismuth and silver.

Removal of coloring material from the skin may be difficult. It involves irritation and inflammation with the peeling away of superficial layers to get down to the area where the pigment is held. There are records of a considerable number of cases in which this coloring has been successfully removed.

Two chief substances in tattooing are carbon in the form of China ink which appears blue and cambric which looks red. Most tattooing tends to fade gradually because the blood will remove the particles as it removes other foreign substances from the body. This, however, may require many years of time.

Best advice about tattooing is not to have it done.

Breaking of chinaware is a big item on ocean liner. On an average voyage, a big liner requires 12,000 assorted glasses, 21,000 plates, and 10,000 cups.

ROBERT BARRY—hero, explorer.
MELISSA LANE—heroine, Barry's partner.
HONEY BEE GIRL—Indian member of Barry's party.
HADES JONES—pioneer; member Barry's party.

Yesterday, Bob Barry goes to the store to meet his business partner, M. M. Lane, and finds to his utter amazement the partner is a lady.

CHAPTER II

ROBERT WILSON BARRY, Ph.D., had been a graduated cum laude from Harvard at what he felt was the mature age of 24. That was 18 months prior to the day he greeted M. M. Lane at Blanco Canyon. He should have been trained and experienced enough to weather any surprise with poise, but this one shook him. Mary Melissa noted his tan, and his black eyes, and his rather broad shoulders, even as she awaited his answer there before the stage station. She had asked him, a stranger, where to find a hotel. The stranger had acted strangely indeed.

His mouth had dropped open, and he had fumbled around like a gawky adolescent. Then he had rather rudely asked her name, and heard it. "Pardon me," he stammered along now. "You—you're Lane? Lane. Well, I—" he suddenly grinned—"I was stampeded that time, Miss Lane. I surely wasn't expecting you. I mean, a girl. You see, I—well, the fact is I'm Barry. I'm—I'm glad to see you. Can't we—"

"Oh!" Mary Melissa was staring at him in quick alarm. This young westerner couldn't be "Robert Wilson Barry, Ph.D."!

The few seconds interval gave Bob time to note that she was lovely. But that thought only irritated him a trifle more. He hadn't wanted a lovely partner; he had advertised for a moneyed one, not a young and dimpled one.

THE girl and the young scientist had much talking to do. Bob suggested, with a friendly smile, that they go to the "leading hotel," as her letter had said. It consisted of two rooms in the rear of Ma Pelphry's house which she occasionally rented to travelers. She offered Ma would let them sit in her parlor and talk. He picked up Miss Lane's two big suitcases, and she carried a smaller bag. The walk would be 300 yards or so.

"This is a most regrettable mistake all around, Miss Lane," Bob began. "I feel that I should—" "Oh, look!"

Mary Melissa stopped and pointed. A man had unhitched a horse and mounted it, there in front of a store. The horse, evidently somewhat new to the saddle, at once set in to be rid of the man. It bucked right up across the board porch of the store, smashing a chair and breaking a glass window.

"E-e-e-e-e-e!" the animal screamed in anger, pitching like the wild beast it was. Miss Lane and Bob, not 50 feet away, ducked toward a tree for safety. Dust enveloped them.

"Goodness!" exclaimed Mary Melissa. "He handled that horse well. I expected him to be thrown and maybe badly hurt. Who is he?"

"I don't know," said Bob Barry. "Stranger to me. I don't get in to Blanco Canyon much. Some cowpoke."

MA PELPHRY took Mary Melissa into her private quarters and "visited" with her, in the name of hospitality. He never let such an opportunity pass. The interval gave both Bob and the girl time to collect their thoughts.

"E-e-e-e-e-e!" the animal screamed in anger, pitching like the wild beast it was. Miss Lane and Bob, not 50 feet away, ducked toward a tree for safety.

"I'm sorry this thing is all mixed up, Miss Lane," Bob began when she rejoined him. "But if you will pardon me for suggesting it, there may still be a way out. I mean, so both of us can be good sports about it all. And I think that's what you'd want."

They smiled at each other. "Now my idea is this, Miss Lane: Since there are certain very definite conventions, as both of us will realize, what would you say to a chaparron?"

Mary Melissa nodded, and waited expectantly. "My thought," Bob resumed, "is to hire old Hades Jones. Then you would be—"

"Who? What's his name?" "Zachary Jones. But he's called Hades, because he's hell on Indians. Hates 'em. They fought him in pioneer days, killed some of his family, and he is still a redskin hater. But he's 70-odd now, and a fanatic on religion. Quite a character."

"Let's hire Mr. Jones," she agreed.

IT took just 40 minutes to locate Zachary Jones and hire him as nominal mule wrangler and odd job man for the archaeological expedition. The old fellow grinned in delight. He hadn't, as a matter of fact, been any too prosperous of late.

He took a fancy to Mary Melissa right off. "Better buy yourself some good tough britches," he warned her. "Dresses won't fit in, whar we're goin'."

"Would a riding habit do, Mr. Jones?" she asked. "Call me Hades, like ever'body else. Don't care nothin' 'bout yore habits, long as they're respectable. But you'll need pants."

Bob Barry grinned. Things were beginning to work out, he felt. Old Hades was wise from half a century in the mountains. Bob checked over his plans. He Great Mistake—or Great Discovery?

Prof. J. B. Rhine of Duke University has written an amazing book in "New Frontiers of the Mind" (Farrar and Rinehart; $2.50). He appears to have made one of the most fantastic mistakes in scientific history—or to have handed science one of its most profoundly revolutionary discoveries.

Prof. Rhine has been exploring the misty borderland of the human mind, trying to find out whether such things as telepathy and clairvoyance have anything in them when subjected to rigorous scientific analysis. His verdict, offered tentatively but backed by a wealth of evidence, is that they have—plenty.

Specifically, he and his co-workers at Duke sought to learn whether the human mind can receive sensations through other means than the five senses. They conducted their tests by means of decks of cards bearing five kinds of inscriptions. Some hundreds of people were asked to identify the cards blindly, merely by looking at the back of the deck—or, in some cases, without even seeing the deck at all.

The results were astounding. About one person in five could identify the cards with a far higher record of success than the laws of chance would allow. After thousands and thousands of tests, Prof. Rhine is satisfied that there is some power—extra-sensory perception, he calls it—by which the brain can receive impressions without the aid of any of the senses.

What this power may be and how it operates he has no idea. He is free to admit that a tremendous lot of ex-

Child's Interests Dictate Book Selection After Nursery Years

(This is the third of six articles by Olive Roberts Barton in connection with Children's Book Week, November 15-20.)

Here I am listing some very excellent books for the junior child, the boy and girl from six to nine years of age. But age limits are forever elastic, where reading is concerned. As usual, it is best to know a child's taste before buying, and always wise to go and see for one's self what the book stalls offer.

As children under ten are given to general reading, and boys and girls with few exceptions meet on common ground in the book world, this list will include both so-called boys' and girls' books, indiscriminately.

Paul Bunyan Swings His Axe, told by Dell McCormick (Caxton); Wet Magie, by E. Nesbit (Coward McCann); High Water, by Phil Stong (Dodd Mead); Winnebago Boy, by Mario and Campbell (Seachester (Harcourt Brace); Treasure Box of Stories for Children, compiled by May Lamberton (Little Brown); Blue Nels and Red Sals, by Helen B. Preston (Longmans); Azam, by Irvin S. Cobb (Rand McNally); A Pony for Jean, by Joanna Cannon (Scribners); The Steamline Train Book (series), by W. C. and H. S. Pryor (Harcourt Brace).

Stories About Other Children: The Farm Beyond the Town (girls), by Eliza Orne White (Houghton); Perky, by Alice Akin Atkinson (Viking); The rader's Children, by Laura Adams Armer (Longmans); Tilo, by Rudolf Voorhoeve (Lippincott); Green Tree Dances, by M. I. Ross (Houghton Mifflin); Baby Island, by Carol Ryrie Brink (MacMillan); Kurt Wiese's Picture Book of Animals (Coward McCann); Fun With Boxes, by Joseph Leeming (Stokes); Insect People, by E. King and W. Pessels (Harper); Bible Children, by Blanche Jennings Thompson (Dodd Mead); Sebastian Bach, the Boy From Thuringia (also "Mozart" and "Joseph Haydn"), by Wheeler and Deucher (Dutton).

In Hollywood

"In a Persian (Fish) Market" Is Miseducated by Cinema Arabs

HOLLYWOOD.—All over the lot an opera stage is the current set for "The Yellow Nightingale," and the scene is a Persian garden. It was on this stage that Gladys Swarthout received her much-publicized pelting with squishy tomatoes.

Anyway, the scene is a Persian garden, decorated with 20 flimsily-laid laurel bushes and dancers, flowering trees and graceful pathways. Over an arch is a Persian inscription in Arabic script. The writing has been reproduced accurately because it was copied from a photograph taken in Persia.

A visitor on the set is Dr. Ameneh Fareed, Persian, scholar and local psychiatrist. He looks at the arch and laughs. It seems that the scrawling inscription is not a quotation from Omar Khayyam, nor yet from Saadi nor Hafiz.

It says: "The very best of fish are for sale at this place."

The studio will let it stand. "Actor" Lubitsch. Ernst Lubitsch is directing Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper in a bit of hot argument for a scene in the comedy, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." And whenever Lubitsch directs, he does more acting than anybody on the set.

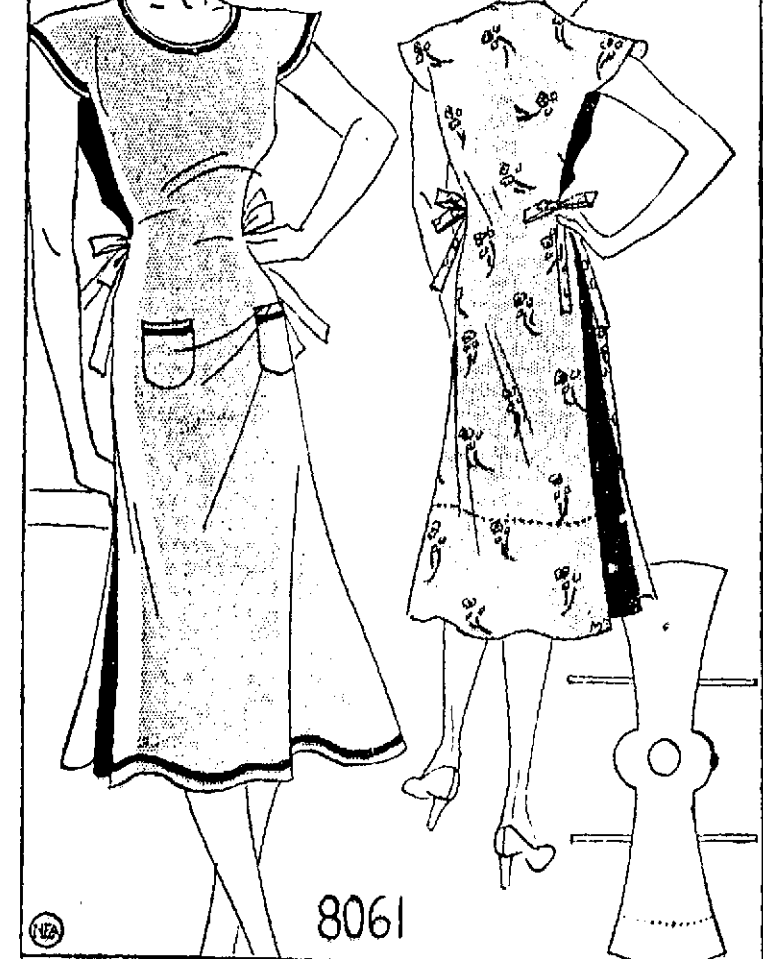

The dispute seems to be over Cooper's purchase of a costly antique bathtub which turns out to be merely a foot tub. After several rehearsals Lubitsch still doesn't get the degree of excitement that he wants, so he steps up and in heavily accented words does the scene with Cooper.

Miss Colbert goes into shrieks of laughter. "You see!" says the director, triumphantly. "That way it is very funny."

"It isn't that," chokes the actress. "Never in my life did I hear anybody platory work remains to be done. But if he is correct in his findings, a discovery of incalculable significance is being made.

How to Get a Head

Tim Holt, son of Jack, is one of the principals in Warner Brothers' western, "Gold Is Where You Find It." He's a two-fisted youngster who has to do some defensive brawling in a saloon with some miners. He's one tough customer, and the ladies fall.

Michael Curtiz, perhaps the ablest director of fast action, has arranged the shot so that Holt's fast draw actually connects the man's jaw. But the victim's head must jerk back realistically and he must fall limply.

"Let go yourself!" storms Curtiz, who also massacres the English language. "Like a rock, fall hard! What do you care should you hit your head? If you hit your head, that makes you a stunt man and you get five bucks extra!"

And He Did Shudder! "Having Wonderful Time," the Ginger Rogers picture, is a comedy. It's a flicker, is full of hard, working gags, and the script is full of the frequently used retort, "Aw, shuddup!"

By this time, everybody on the set is using the catch-phrase as a response for practically anything.

"If you were to say, 'Good morning, Miss Rogers,' she'd probably strike a pose and answer, 'Awwww, shuddup!'"

Other afternoon a dozen cuties who dance in the picture were draped on the steps outside the main entrance RKO. They had been working eight hours with little rest and were pretty well washed. Now, in pajamas and dragging on cigarettes, they were lying at the main gate, waiting for a bus.

A man came across the street and delivered a little lecture. He said that the girls ought to move down the street a little. It was, very undignified, sprawling here this way at the entrance to a great studio.

The tired girls didn't move. Then, if one of them chortled, "Awwww, shuddup!"

The man's jaw dropped. Without another word, Samuel J. Briskin, vice president in charge of production, went on into the studio.

STORIES IN STAMPS

SLAVE WHO CROWNED HIMSELF KING

HARDLY had the French relinquished their hold on Haiti in 1804 when Gen. Henri Christophe, a former Jamaican slave, set up a kingdom of his own design. In all history there was to be no more stirring, no more dramatic story than that of his reign.

Proclaiming himself "Emperor of Haiti," Christophe drove the white planters from their lands, created dukes and counts and princes from among his choicest subjects, and ordered the rest into the most merciless of slavery.

He then began the execution of his fondest dream—construction of Christophe's Citadel, impregnable fortress atop a 2000-foot cliff. Slaves toiled and toiled and died in that work, dragging the myriad tons of masonry and cannon up the steep precipitous trails. And Christophe ordered every fourth man shot who lagged on the job; and then every third man; then every second man. History credited 30,000 human sacrifices to that wild dream.

But at last it was finished; a vast, rambling, beautiful citadel. And it was finished none too soon, for revolt had struck the "Black Napoleon's" kingdom. Suddenly these same toiling subjects massed into a howling, murderous mob. Thousands streamed up the cliff to the great plateau. Christophe recognized the end. Seeing his last slave turn against him, he turned a pistol to his body and died, a silver bullet in his heart.

That was 100 years ago. But today Christophe's citadel stands as it was, a magnificent, abandoned, crumbling, old stone structure, a relic of the past.

It is pictured on a 2 1/2 cent Haitian stamp.

We dream of roses we shall find
Some day by some fair garden wall.
We dream of paths that some day
Must lead us to the garden door.
Fulfill the quest, the wanderlust
That stirs in all our souls.
A rose that grows without a thorn
We dream to find—tomorrow's dawn!
Then memory like a restless ghost Goes back to roses climbing through

Which we may enter never more.
Where velvet lay the dew.
"Ah, yes, the perfect rose," we say,

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

Christian Workers
Text: 1 Corinthians 3:10-15;
Galatians 6:6-10

In the great work of building the house of faith and the Kingdom of God, the ordained minister is no more important than the ordinary church member. It might be said, in fact, that the ministry depends for its strength and power upon the church of which the minister is a part.

Paul, who valued very highly his apostleship, and who was in some respects very insistent upon his place and status, recognized this importance of the individual church member.

"We are members one with another,"
he wrote, and he pictured the church through the symbol of the body, in which every member had its proper function, and in which even the lowliest organ had as essential a part in a well-working organism as the most important organ.

The need could not say to the hand or foot, "I have no need of thee." The strength of the body was in the compactness that every joint and part supplied.

Here in this lesson upon Christian workers, Paul lays stress upon the same thing in a different figure, the

which the master builder makes the plan and lays the foundation, but in which the strength and beauty of the structure depend upon every man's work.

Paul had a keen sense of judgment.
There was a proving and a testing time for every man's work. Even good intentions and sincerity were not enough.
A man might be saved by his faith and good intentions, but if he built weakly or unsoundly, his work would be destroyed.

How important it is that we should consider this. The fear of judgment, the hostility to criticism, are deep in the mind and attitude of many people. But the true workman wants his work to be judged. He resents the criticism of the incompetent and the ignorant, but he values above all else the approval of the intelligent critic, or some clear judgment that shows him wherein he may have failed or come short of the ideal.

Christian work, in this respect is no different from other work. Christian workers are tested by the same standards of competency and spiritual efficiency.

There is no unusual law that protects men and women in the exercise of religious life and labor. If they sow sparingly they will reap sparingly.
If they sow poor seed, they will reap a poor crop or no crop at all. If they sow in unprepared soil, there will be little yield, or the weeds will spring up and choke the grain.

For all in Christian work, as in all other work, it is written, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap."

But there is no need either of poor seed or of poor sowing. To the Christian worker there opens up a wide field of opportunity, and to all these comes Paul's great appeal, "As we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of the faith."

An exploring party back from the jungles brings a new vegetable which has the leading cooks puzzled. They don't know what to make of it.

Authorities disagree as to why men have to sleep. Sometimes it's just to get away from authorities who disagree.

Johnny Weissmuller, Tarzan jungle yeller, speaks for first time in new movie role. When the fundamentalist hear of this, he may also be cast in a new evolution case.

Hempstead Home Agent

With the Fall Vegetables
With fall vegetables still being gathered from the garden, Hempstead county home demonstration club members are already making plans for next spring's plantings.

Plowing the garden plot at this time of year will increase yields and reduce disease and insect troubles, says
P. T. Ecton, extension horticulturist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. He recommends turning under all weed growth or fall plants, as they will furnish needed humus to the soil. After the ground has mellowed all winter, in the spring it is necessary to merely stir the soil, place the fertilizer, and sow the seed or set the plants.

Trash in the fence corners and ditches furnishes a host for many diseases and insects during the winter time, and should be cleaned out, the horticulturist points out. Oats, wheat, or rye planted as a winter cover crop will control washing and improve the soil, as well as furnish a green crop for chickens, he adds.

Even tin cans and corn husks will contribute to the gaiety of the Christmas trees in many Hempstead county homes.

Gifts can be made to do more than their share in the merry making if they are packaged and wrapped in an unusual and attractive way.

Grown breads and puddings can be cooked in tin cans which will serve later as the gift containers. Number two tin cans or baking powder cans are nice for this type of gift. If tin cans are used, the top should be cut with a can opener to leave only the smooth top edge.

Suggestions for decorating the cans are given by Miss Sybil D. Bates, extension specialist in home industries, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. After the puddings and breads are baked, remove them from the cans. Wash the cans and decorate with enamel in any color desired or lacquer with metallic paint in gold, silver, red or green. If baking powder cans are used, punch two holes in the lid through which ribbon can be run to tie a decorative bow on top, with a twig of holly or a small branch of pine with cones.

Fruit cake baked in pound coffee cans makes excellent gifts and the cans may be decorated in the same way. The coffee boxes and small boxes one can pick up from the grocery store are useful in making containers for all sorts of confections.

Miss Bates suggests an interesting container for confections can be made from a gourd. Select a large sized gourd. Cut the neck off, making an opening, scoop out the inside and clean thoroughly. Drill four holes on opposite sides of the neck through which to insert a cord that holds the lid in place. These gourds may be decorated with paint or left the natural color. Instead of cutting the neck, the opening can be cut on the side drilling the holes through which the cord can be inserted.

For gifts of jelly, marmalades, pickles and canned meat, fruit and vegetables, nothing makes a more attractive container than a split oak basket in the old-fashioned mason shape. Place the jars in the basket and make them secure by filling the space with green pine straw. The caps of the jars can be covered with red cellophane. A red cellophane bow through which has been inserted a pine twig with several cones is tied to the handle of the basket.

Large husks taken from ears of corn make attractive containers for popcorn. The corn is packed in small cellophane bags that will fit in the husks in place of the ear of corn. The package can be tied with a red or green ribbon and ornamented with a sprig of holly, Miss Bates suggests.

Happy people never make great musicians.—Agnes Clune Quinlan, Philadelphia pianist.

TCU, Rice Battle Tops Conference

Battle at Fort Worth Is Expected to Draw
30,000 Fans

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Ordinary football players haven't stopped him, so Texas Christian plans to toss a nine-year jinx at Ernie Lain, the Rice Institute sophomore, in their Saturday meeting that may take most of the scramble out of the Southwest conference.

Only conference game of the day, the Fort Worth battle is expected to draw better than 30,000 faithful despite a cold wave, is the Southwest's top offering.

Not since 1924 has a Rice team disposed of the Christians. There was a lull of four years before the teams started at it again, and since 1928 the Christians have been knocking over the Owl eleven. The only Rice defeat of 1934 came from TCU, 7-2.

Lain, burly, 218-pound halfback who passes and runs with the same deadly effect, comes to Fort Worth as the most "marked man" since the days of Southern Methodist's Bobby Wilson. Responsible for eight of the Owls' nine touchdowns scored to date, Lain carries the hopes of a conference title for the Owls.

A Rice victory would put them just one game away from the title and in a position where a split in their wind-up games with Baylor and Southern Methodist could clinch it.

Victims of narrow beatings since the season's start, the Christians whopped Texas, 14-0, last week-end with Davey O'Brien carrying the load. Fears that John Hall, the tackle-blasting halfback would not get into the Rice game, were dispelled when he rounded back into shape and took part in last-minute drills.

Down at Beaumont Baylor plays its first interconference game in five years against a big, rugged Loyola of Los Angeles team, one that dumped Centenary its last time out. Determined to wind up the season with the same bludge that characterized its start, Baylor promised to bounce back from the licking Southern Methodist applied last week.

Meanwhile, the Methodists, a great club away from Baylor pushed on towards the Pacific coast and a Saturday night date with the University of California at Los Angeles. A sophomore backfield that sparked against Baylor, Nolan (General) Jackson, George (Red) Ewing, Wally Bearden, Chelsen Crouch and Bob Beville, were Matty Bell's chief hopes of tearing UCLA apart.

Both Tuxes and Texs A. and M. remain idle over the week-end preparing for their Thanksgiving Day classic at College Station, but Arkansas, winding up with terrific drive, engages George Washington at Little Rock.

STAR DUST

By LEONARD ELLIS

Jack Robison, former Hope High School and University of Arkansas star, is having a great season as mentor of the Stuttgart Ricebirds.

To date, Robison's team has won eight victories against no defeats. One of the best records Stuttgart football teams have enjoyed in years.

Last week his team attracted more attention after downing the Forrest City Thunderbolts, 6 to 0. Robison's team is heavily favored to win its ninth straight Friday night in a "homecoming" game against Lonoke.

NEA Service which supplies this and more than 700 newspapers with reading and picture material, selects an all-southwest college football team. The first team:

Ends—Benton of Arkansas and Ramsey of Texas Tech.
Tackles—Hale of TCU and Young of Texas A. & M.
Guards—Routt and Jones, both of Texas A. & M.
Center—Aldrich, TCU.
Quarter—O'Brien of TCU.
Halfbacks—Patterson of Baylor and Wolff of Texas.
Fullback—Lain of Rice Institute.

The second team:
Ends—Boyd of Baylor and Hamilton of Arkansas.
Tackles—Laman of Arkansas and Sprague of SMU.
Guards—Moore of Rice and Rogers of TCU.
Center—Hagler of St. Mary's.
Quarter—Brazell of Baylor.
Halfbacks—Sloan of Arkansas and Todd of Texas A. & M.
Fullback—Tully of East Texas Teachers.

Woodell, center, is the only University of Arkansas man selected on the third team.

The Bobcats have enjoyed another good season under Coach Foy Hammons. To date the Bobcats have won seven and lost three.
To keep the record straight we'll review the season by scores:

Razorbacks Head for Little Rock

Rawlings and Stout, Injured, Will Not Make the Trip

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Twenty-eight University of Arkansas Razorbacks will here Friday morning for Little Rock to play the George Washington University eleven Saturday.

Quarterback Ralph Rawlings and Tackle Bob Stout, both injured will not make the trip.
F. G. Larimore and Neal Martin, backs, and Jimmy Amugeri, guard, will go to the capital city Saturday on a special train with the band and Fayetteville fans.

Those leaving Friday are Benton, Hamilton, N. Gordon, Withers, Hitt, Smith, Lamm, Scollings, Mays, Wolfson, Bishop, Thorpe, Owen, Saliba, D. Martin, Woodell, Donaldson, Roberts, Robbins, Sloan, Eakin, Montgomery, Fletcher, Atwood, Cole, Mosely, Lyons and Hamberg.

Stanford Ready Meet California

Winner May Receive Bid for the Annual Rose Bowl Game

SAN FRANCISCO.—(AP)—Stanford and California meet in their annual "big game" Saturday—with a Rose Bowl bid the likely prize.

Handling of the game details is Stanford's responsibility this year. Among the nearly 90,000 fans, Graduate Manager Al R. Masters conjectures, will mingle enough uninvited, unwanted spy artists to fill two jails of college-town dimensions.

Aside from handling more than 20,000 automobiles and the seating of enough people to populate a fair-sized city Masters must get ready for such possible eventualities as these of other years.

Once while a "front man" engaged a ticket seller in a heated argument three confederates sawed a hole in the booth, reached in and swiped 600 tickets. Co-operation of purchasers enabled the authorities to capture the four culprits.

A student ticket taker once admitted a fellow who flashed a sheriff's badge, or so it was stamped. Fifteen other "deputy sheriffs" walked through the gate in quick succession. The original "sheriff" had merely passed his badge through the fence to the others.

Before the board of athletic control members developed the suspicious mind, a racketeer often acquired an arm band similar to that worn by a gate-man. Approaching a ticket taker he would inform him he was wanted at the office and that the newcomer had been sent to substitute.

The new gatekeeper collected duets until he had a handful, then vanished to sell them at a bargain price.

The most spectacular gate crashing stunt at Stanford was contributed a few seasons back by the fellow who swiped a vaulting pole, headed for the 10-foot iron fence on the run and soared over with a yard to spare.

Sure, he saw the game because he sprinted up the stairs with the strides of a hurler and disappeared in the crowd.

Negro Is Held for Material Theft

Elbert Washington Arrested—Stolen Bicycle Is Found

Elbert (Home-Brew) Washington, negro, was arrested Thursday for theft of roofing material from the Hempstead County Lumber company. He is held in jail pending a hearing next Monday.

Deputy Sheriff Reginald Bearden said that Washington confessed to the theft. The roofing material was recovered at the home of Dola Strouther, officers said.

Policeman Clarence Baker said Friday that he had recovered a bicycle believed stolen in or near Hope. The bicycle is held at the police office. It is a Western Flyer model, practically new.

for taxation and for rate making will not necessarily be the same," the governor wrote. "However, it does occur to me that the discrepancies that exist give cause for calling this to the attention of our commissioners."

As an example, Governor Bailey cited the Arkansas Power and Light Company—largest utility company operating in the state—pointing out that books of the company on December 31, 1936, showed net book assets of about $4,000,000, although "the assessed valuation is only $13,551,000, or 21.17 per cent of the book value."

"Files of the Utilities Department and the Corporation Commission reveal that many public utility companies are paying taxes on a valuation which is less than 30 per cent of their book values. One company's assessed valuation is only 11.15 per cent of its book value," the governor said.

"Public utility companies, like other taxpayers, are required by law to pay taxes on 50 per cent of actual value," said Governor Bailey. "It is not my intention here to indicate an opinion that the Arkansas Power and Light Company's book values are excessive or that it is under-assessed. I recognize that there may be factors to be taken into consideration which will not justify fixing a tax valuation of a flat 50 per cent of the company's book value; but the Utilities Department and the Corporation Commission should have all the information relative to these factors."

"When we find that one utility company with fixed assets of $15,905,385 on its books is paying taxes on an assessed valuation of $8,201,500, or 38 per cent, and that several smaller companies are paying taxes on from 40 per cent to 54 per cent of their book values, it seems fundamentally wrong that others should be assessed at 11 to 30 per cent of their book values."

12,000 Goodyear Men Idle Friday

"Sitdown" of 1,600 Employees Throws Balance Out of Work

AKRON, Ohio.—(AP)—Twelve thousand Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. employees were idle Friday as the result of a sitdown precipitated by a scheduled layoff of 1,600 workers.

Operations were suspended in three plants of the largest of Akron's "big three" rubber companies.

John House, president of Goodyear's local of the United Rubber Workers of America, called a union meeting for Sunday to consider the sitdown.

He said the sitdown started at midnight Thursday without union authorization.

Pumpkin Pie 'Ok' for Thanksgiving

Pumpkin Pies Have Gone Modern—Will Have Trimmings

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer
Pumpkin pies have gone modern. The shiny tops prized by grandmother often are concealed now by a coating of whipped cream, fancy meringue, coconut or delicately-flavored sauce.

Fillings, too, are more varied. While standpatters demand their plain—with a thick wedge of tangy cheese alongside—left-wing pie eaters prefer fillings containing fruits or nuts, for instance.

Secrets of Success
There are several secrets for the success of any pumpkin pie. The first lies in the crust. It must be rich and well placed in the pan to allow for a thick filling. A little grated cheese may be added to give a pleasing flavor combination.

The oven should be hot the first ten minutes the pie is in the oven. This will bake the crust so well that the filling will not soak in.

The second secret is in the filling. Although it may be made in a number of ways it must be poured in the layer into the crust, and it must not be permitted to run over the edge. It should rise only to within a fourth of an inch of the top of the crust, since it will rise a little during baking.

Brown sugar enriches the flavor of the filling. Adding a tablespoonful of molasses to the regular ingredients will darken the color.

A combination of spices is usually best. About one teaspoonful of cinnamon and half a teaspoonful of nutmeg, cloves and ginger is enough for each pie.

Quiverty Filling
Eggs are important. Two tablespoonfuls of flour may be used in place of one egg, however, if eggs are too expensive.

The pie is done when the crust is brown and shrinks slightly from the pan. The filling should be slightly quiverty, since it will stiffen as it cools.

When the pie is removed from the oven it should be placed on a rack to cool. Doing so helps prevent a soggy crust.

Variations:
Add one-third of a cup of any of the following to each pie: chopped candied orange peel, preserved fruits, dates, raisins, figs, nuts, coconut or orange marmalade.

Sprinkle grated cheese, dates, nuts, marshmallows or nuts over the top of the pie five minutes before you remove it from the oven.

Ten minutes before you remove the pie from the oven criss-cross thin strips of unbaked pastry over the top. Serve the pie plain or topped with whipped cream, cream cheese, hard sauce, orange sherbet or crushed coconut macaroons.

CLUB NOTES

Allen
The Allen Home Demonstration club met at 9 o'clock November 17 at the home of Mrs. Bill Schooley. The demonstration was mattress making. The morning and early afternoon was spent in completing a 50 pound mattress.

During the business meeting in the afternoon the following officers were elected: president, Mrs. Carol Schooley; vice president, Miss Isabelle Schooley; secretary, Mrs. Lee Garland; reporter, Mrs. Owen Nix.

The appointment of leaders was postponed until the December meeting. A committee consisting of Mrs. Bill Schooley, Miss Isabelle Schooley and Mrs. Carol Allen was appointed to invite the women of the New Hope community to join our club.

The club voted to have the next meeting in the form of a Christmas party on the night of December 14 with Mrs. Clifford Russell and Mrs. Clifford Messer hostesses. The meeting will be at the club house with our husbands as guests.

The social hour was enjoyed at noon with a delicious pot luck luncheon served buffet style.

War Not Mentioned
NEW YORK.—(AP)—Viscount Cecil of Chelwood said Thursday night: "I don't think there's any great danger of an immediate world war."

"The most effective step that could be taken today for the furtherance of world peace," he added, "is furtherance of the League of Nations."

"I think young people should join League of Nations societies instead of signing pledges not to bear arms. Force exists. It is a fact, and you can't ignore it. We would work to control force by international agreement."

GMC Adds Three New Models For 1938

Attractive stream-styling and important mechanical advancements distinguish a group of three new light-duty trucks added to the 1938 GMC truck series by General Motors Truck and Coach Division. The new models are of 3/4-ton, 1-ton and 1 1/4-ton capacity. In addition, GMC engineers have incorporated many new features of mechanical design in its extensive line of conventional and cab-over-engine trucks in a wide range of 1/2 to 12 tons. Top left: new 3/4-ton panel. Top right: new radiator, cab and cowl effect. Lower: largest standard pick-up in truck industry.

Three new light-duty GMC trucks, including a new 3/4-ton, a new 1-ton and a sturdy 1 1/4-ton model, are announced for 1938 by General Motors Truck and Coach Division. In addition GMC engineers have added many new features of mechanical design to every chassis in its extensive line of conventional and cab-over-engine trucks.

Conventional models have gained new and smarter styling through a striking front end treatment involving a name plate, radiator ornament and insignia plate of new design, in combination with new color background for the radiator grille, a further evolution of the "Dual-Tone" design that has been a distinguishing feature of the 1937 GMC trucks. In a new use of colors, changing appearance is achieved by using body color in the radiator grille background, instead of the moulting colors. These changes, in combination with flowing streamlines and a choice of 11 Dual-Tone color designs, make GMC's 1938 products highly attractive from the standpoint of appearance.

The new units introduced for 1938 are the 3/4-ton T-145 with a gross vehicle weight of 5,300 lbs., the 1-ton T-15 with g. v. w. of 6,000 lbs., and the 1 1/4-ton T-155 with g. v. w. of 7,000 lbs. Model T-145 is offered in a 126 inch wheelbase and maximum 15 inch (7.50 15) single tires. Model T-15 is offered in a 131 1/2 inch wheelbase with maximum 7.50 17 single tires and Model T-155 in a 131 1/2 inch wheelbase with maximum 7.00 16 dual tires.

A new engine of 223-cubic inch displacement, especially designed for rapid, light delivery service, furnishes the power plant for all three new models. Among the outstanding features of this new engine are full length water jackets for better cooling, a packless water pump with automatically adjustable seal, electro-plated cast iron pistons, sturdy counterweighted crankshaft and harmonic balancer, full pressure lubrication, rifle drilled connecting rods, metered oil flow, pressure-suction crankcase ventilation, rusher valve cooling, vacuum controlled distributor with gas selection, ventilated type generator with auxiliary light switch control, high compression cylinder head and other features that contribute to maximum efficiency. This engine is also used in the 1/2-ton units.

Other mechanical features common to all three of the new light-duty models include big rear springs, husky spring brackets and shackles, heavy frames, new rear axles with massive housings (T-155 has a full floating rear axle) and three-speed synchromesh transmission standard with four-speed transmission optional.

Wide-Spread Damage in Tropical Sea Storm Since Wednesday

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—The death toll of the Philippine Island's second typhoon in a week jumped to 47 Friday as reports of sea disasters were received here.

The fishing boat Miss Lilaon sank near Masabate. Only one member of the crew of 31 was known to have been saved.

Reports indicated wide-spread damage to public works, private property, crops, coconut and banana plantations, all swept by a tropical storm which started Wednesday.

so simple. They knew she had been a seamstress, they believed she still loved her husband, and they thought she'd still have to work for a living. So they put one and two and three together.

If she had to work for a living, she would be a seamstress, and if she loved her husband she would want to be as near him as possible so that she could steal glimpses of him.

So they went from shop to shop in the neighborhood of his home and, sure enough, up came a little lady who, after much questioning, sobbed out an admission that she was Mrs. Larry Schmid.

Bridegroom Put to the Test
She had fled from him because her face had been horribly mutilated in the ship explosion. She didn't want him to see her scarred cheeks, she wanted him to remember her only as the gay little girl he had held in his arms the night they waited around the salon.

"I still don't want to see him," she sobbed to the investigators. "Please don't tell him where I am. Let him love me as he remembers me—don't let him see me now and hate me."

But the investigators had a hunch. "We'll take pictures of you, ask him if he thinks you are his wife, and if he loves you as you are he'll come to you."

Mr. Lawrence Stamm, sitting in the offices of the Skip Tracers, looked at the pictures, one by one. When he had finished he rose, pulled on his hat, and said:

"Come on, Mr. Eisenberg, lead me to her—hurry. I want to finish that honeymoon with my bride."

She was still his pretty little sweetheart of 20 years before.

NEXT: "Who am I?"

eligibility would be protested, I am confident that I, if chosen, would be eligible to serve, but, being totally dependent on my own means I would not be financially able to contest such a suit over an office that paid fifty dollars per month. Neither can I conscientiously ask my friends to support me under such circumstances. For that reason, I have asked that my name be omitted from the ballot. I deeply appreciate the loyal support of my friends and the apparent willingness of the citizenship of Hope to "give a young man a chance." I want to assure them I have moved to Hope to stay and to earn my livelihood here in the practice of law, and that my intentions of so doing have not been weakened by this unfortunate incident."
